Reunion Center
9 East 4th Street
Built in 1917 during the swaggering days of the oil boom, the 10-story Reunion Center began life as the First National Bank of Tulsa, also known as “The Oilman’s Bank.” The bankers at First National wanted their third home to be as grand as their clients’ aspirations, so architect E.A. Rush, who also designed the famed Atlas Life Building and Tulsa’s first City Hall, finished the building’s lobby in marble and trimmed its high ceiling in gold. The original brass elevators still lead tenants to the building’s 120,000 square feet above the bank lobby, which includes the “Banker’s Boardroom,” designed by famed architect Bruce Goff. Hosted by Reunion Investments Limited: 918-799-86700.

The 320 Boston Building
320 South Boston Avenue
This beloved landmark was designed as a bank – and as a mooring station for dirigibles. The tower was also a beacon for weather alerts. During the 1960s either red or green lights would be beamed on the tower to signal weather conditions. The building was originally home to the Exchange National Bank and was completed in 1928. It stood 10 stories tall and was the largest bank in Oklahoma. It was designed by George Winkler, who also designed the Mayo Hotel. In 1929, the building was expanded to its current height of 22 stories. The 320 Building is in the Neo-Classical style and is connected to the Kennedy Building by a tunnel under Boston Avenue. Hosted by 320 Boston, LLC (918-584-1414).

Mid-Continent Tower
401 South Boston Avenue
Listed in the National Register of Historic Places, the Mid-Continent Tower consists of two separate structures not actually in physical contact. The first is the Mid-Continent Building, a 16-story structure on the west side of the complex, completed in 1918. The second is the Mid-Continent Tower, a 36-story structure cantilevered over the original building. Both structures are freestanding, separated by six inches of space to permit each to sway, expand or contract independently. Hosted by Mid-Continent Tower, LLC, 918-699-0300.

201 Executive Center
201 West 5th Street
Built in 1975, the 201 Executive Center is a six-story office building with large balconies, located across from the Tulsa County Courthouse. Hosted by Switchgear Search and Recruiting. Managed by KPM: 918-581-3100.

Hyatt Regency Hotel
100 East 2nd Street
The Hyatt Regency Tulsa, in the heart of Oklahoma’s most vibrant business, entertainment and cultural districts, overlooks the scenic gardens of the Williams Center Complex. Connected via sky-bridge to Williams Towers, the luxury high-rise hotel is adjacent to the Tulsa Performing Arts Center and just a few walking blocks from the Convention Center and BOK Center. Contact: 918-234-1234 or salesinfo@hyattregencytulsa.com
Mayo 420
420 South Main Street
Originally five stories tall, this building was built to house the Mayo furniture business. During the oil boom, the building was expanded to 10 stories, to be used as offices for oil barons. Today it offers luxury living in the heart of downtown Tulsa. Hosted by Wiggin Properties: 918-582-8100.

Aloft Tulsa Downtown
& wxyz bar
200 Civic Center
From the inside, the Aloft hotel downtown looks like a mix of Mid-Century Modern and high-tech convenience with touches of industrial style. From the outside, it looks a lot like the former City Hall. The building was built in 1969 and has historic preservation status. Contact: 918-947-8200.

BOK / Williams Tower
One Williams Center
The BOK Tower at One Williams Center is the crown jewel of Tulsa’s skyline. The 52-story tower was built in 1975 as headquarters for the Williams Companies. At a height of 677 feet, it was the tallest building in any of the five Plains States – Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, and South Dakota – as well as the surrounding states of Missouri, Arkansas and New Mexico, until surpassed by Oklahoma City’s Devon Tower in 2011. Designed by Minoru Yamasaki, the BOK Tower is similar in appearance and construction to New York City’s World Trade Center (WTC) towers, destroyed in the terrorist attack of 9/11/2001, which Yamasaki also designed. The BOK Tower has a quarter the footprint and stands at almost half the height of the original WTC towers. The BOK Tower structure comprises 14,750 tons of steel and 41,588 cubic yards of concrete. Managed by Williams Headquarters Building Company: 918-743-7788.

The Petroleum Club Building
601 South Boulder Avenue
The Petroleum Club Building got its name from the private club that moved into its top three floors when the building was erected in 1963. The decline of the oil business in the late ’70s and early ’80s led to a falloff in club membership and heavy financial losses. In 1994, fire ravaged the top two stories and caused serious smoke damage to the rest of the building. This forced the club to close. Club facilities were later rebuilt and remained open until 2011. In 2015, the building’s top floors were renovated by the current tenant – and our Top of the Town host – the web-based consumer advocacy organization ConsumerAffairs. Managed by KPM: 918-582-5243.

The Philtower
427 South Boston Avenue
In many ways, the history of the Philtower mirrors the history of Tulsa itself. Just a few years away from its 90th Anniversary and poised to enter an exciting new period, Tulsa’s iconic Neo-Gothic skyscraper is situated at the hub of the city’s current and future growth, right in the heart of Downtown Tulsa’s Deco District. From its origins in the oil boom of the 1920s to its central position in the local economy of the 1950s to its contemporary rejuvenation, the Philtower has developed and diversified along with the needs of the local community. Boasting terrazzo floors, brass fixtures and mahogany trim, all original to the building, the Philtower is a perfect marriage of historic charm with modern amenities – a place where residents and businesses alike feel at home. Managed by River City Development: 918-584-0331.
110 W. 7th St.
Completed in 1971, this building was constructed to serve as the world headquarters of Cities Service Oil and Gas Corp. when the company moved its headquarters from the famous Cities Service Building in New York City. At one point, the building had 2,300 employees and the company was Tulsa’s largest private employer. The building was constructed in the International Style that matured after World War II. The style is characterized by a square or rectangular footprint, a cubic “extruded rectangle” form, windows running in broken rows to form a grid, and façade angles set at 90 degrees. The building is 388 feet tall and has 28 floors served by 11 elevators. Today it is home to a variety of businesses, including law firms and oil and gas companies. Managed by Newmark Grubb Levy Beffort Strange: 918-295-6900.

The Mayo Hotel
115 W. 5th St.
The Mayo Hotel opened in 1925. At 19 stories, it was the tallest building in Oklahoma. Built to exceed the expectations of the most discriminating travelers, it boasted modern amenities of its time, including 600 rooms each with ceiling fans and Tulsa’s first running ice water. Architect George Winkler designed the building in the Sullivanesque style of the Chicago School. The hotel was home to famous oilmen J. Paul Getty and Waite Phillips. Listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1980, it sat vacant for nearly 30 years. The Snyder family of Tulsa purchased the building in 2001, renovated the lobby and hosted events there until 2008. The Mayo Hotel re-opened its doors in late 2009 after a historic renovation restored the hotel to its original luster, with 102 hotel rooms, 76 luxury residences and event spaces. Contact: 918-582-6296.

Child Care Resource Center: Quality Care for Every Child.

Overwhelming evidence confirms that a child’s growth, health, development and learning all hinge on early childhood experiences. The mission of Child Care Resource Center is to support access to quality care for every child.

Resource and Referral. part of the state and national Child Care Resource and Referral system, helps families with children find safe, affordable child care that meets their needs, offering free referrals and a variety of tools that help families evaluate available child care options.

The Resource Library offers resource materials for care givers, developmentally appropriate toys, books and other items for kids, and a work area for making low-cost children’s materials using die-cut machines, laminators and other tools.

The Child and Adult Care Food Program provides reimbursement for nutritious meals and snacks served in licensed family child care homes.

Quality Enhancement Specialists help child care centers and family child care homes achieve and sustain accreditation through the National Association for the Education of Young Children for center-based programs and the National Association for Family Child Care. Services include program assessment, technical assistance, and staff development.
